Yesterday afternoon I watched a documentary on television. It was about the postcolonial time period in American history. The documentary began in the prewar era before the Revolutionary War. It ended in the postwar era with the preexisting 13 colonies declaring their independence for England.

Afterward, I turned off the television and decided to go and read my graphic novel. I began with the forward. This is the portion of the book where the author explains a little bit about the topic of the book. I became so preoccupied by the story, that I didn't realize it was dinner time until my stomach began to grumble. Dinner had become an afterthought. I ran down the stairs and was pleasantly surprised. My mom had cooked my favorite meal - Mac and Cheese! Delicious!
