This weekend is my brother's high school graduation. He is 18 years old and going to college next year. We are going to have a celebration at my house in order to congratulate him on his accomplishment. He is the first generation of people in my family to complete high school and go on to be accepted to college. My mom says this is an illustration of what can happen when you give 100% and never give up. She has been buying decorations for the party all week. Today she has me helping her to decorate the backyard with blue and gold streamers. Those are the colors of my brother's high school. She is really making a big production out of this event! It is her goal to create the most festive environment ever! She even sat down with me to create a map to indicate where all of the tables, chairs, and decorations should be placed. She is taking this party to a whole new level! I must say, this is going to be one exciting party!
